JUNE 8, TENTH SUNDAY IN ORDINARY TIME Matthew was a publican. A publican in the Roman administration was an individual who operated as a private contractor in collecting taxes for the Roman government. He leased, for a fixed price from the government, the job of collecting taxes; and whatever he could get above the cost of his contract was profit for him. Needless to say, tax collectors were hated by the average person. Jesus invites the publican Matthew to become a follower and without hesitation Matthew leaves his position to follow him. Should we not be as prompt in responding to whatever invitation God gives us? The Pharisees condemned Jesus for associating with sinners, but they failed to reflect on the fact that they themselves were sinners; they were brimming with the sin of pride.
